1. Introduction

The Department of English (P.G.) organized a seminar on the topic "Schools & Movements in English Literature" on 12th September 2022. The purpose of this seminar was to provide students with an in-depth understanding of the major literary periods and movements in English literature, focusing on significant works and authors from each era. Mr. Ch. Gopi, an esteemed Faculty of English from Abhyudaya College, Guntur, was invited as the resource person to lead the seminar.

2. Objectives of the Seminar

The seminar was organized with the following objectives:

- To provide a historical overview of English literature: The seminar aimed to offer students a comprehensive understanding of the development of English literature through various historical periods.
- To explore key literary works and authors: Students were introduced to important literary works and influential authors from different eras, helping them recognize the evolution of literary styles and themes.
- To understand the characteristics of different literary movements: The session sought to highlight the distinguishing features of major literary schools and movements, enhancing students' analytical skills.
- To encourage critical thinking and discussion: The seminar encouraged students to engage in discussions and critically analyze the impact of historical, social, and cultural contexts on literature.

3. Seminar Proceedings

The seminar commenced at 10:00 a.m. with a welcome address by Mrs. K. E. Jeevana Jyothi, Head of the Department of English (P.G.). She introduced the resource person, Mr. Ch. Gopi, and provided a brief overview of the seminar's agenda, emphasizing the importance of understanding literary history in a holistic manner.

Key topics covered during the seminar included:

1. Old English Period (450 - 1066):

Literary Works: Mr. Gopi discussed the significance of epic poetry in this era, focusing on Beowulf and The Dream of the Rood. He highlighted the oral tradition of storytelling and the use of alliteration and kennings in Old English literature.

Cultural Context: The resource person elaborated on the influence of Anglo-Saxon culture and the Christianization of England on the literature of this period.

2. Middle English Period (1066 - 1500):

Geoffrey Chaucer and The Canterbury Tales: Mr. Gopi provided an analysis of Chaucer's The Canterbury Tales, discussing its structure, themes, and the use of vernacular English. He explained how Chaucer's work marked a shift towards more personal and realistic storytelling.

Language Evolution: The seminar touched on the transition from Old English to Middle English and the impact of the Norman Conquest on the English language and literature.

3. Renaissance Period (Late 15th to Early 17th Century):

William Shakespeare: Mr. Gopi delved into the works of William Shakespeare, highlighting his contributions to drama and poetry. The discussion included an examination of Shakespeare's major tragedies, comedies, and sonnets.

Christopher Marlowe and Edmund Spenser: The seminar also covered the works of Christopher Marlowe and Edmund Spenser, focusing on Marlowe's Doctor Faustus and Spenser's The Faerie Queene. Mr. Gopi explained how these authors contributed to the flourishing of English literature during the Renaissance.

Throughout the seminar, Mr. Gopi engaged the students with questions and encouraged them to participate in discussions about the themes, styles, and significance of the literary works covered. The session was interactive, with students expressing their thoughts on how historical and cultural factors influenced the literature of each period.

4. Outcomes of the Seminar

The seminar successfully met its objectives, leading to the following outcomes:

- Enhanced Knowledge of Literary History: Students gained a deeper understanding of the chronological development of English literature, from the Old English period to the Renaissance.
- Recognition of Key Literary Figures and Works: Participants were able to identify and appreciate the contributions of key authors such as Geoffrey Chaucer, William Shakespeare, Christopher Marlowe, and Edmund Spenser.
- Improved Analytical Skills: The seminar equipped students with the tools to analyze and interpret literary texts within their historical and cultural contexts.
- Increased Engagement with Literature: The interactive nature of the seminar stimulated students' interest in exploring further literary periods and movements.
- Preparation for Advanced Studies: The seminar laid a solid foundation for students to pursue more advanced studies in English literature, particularly in understanding the evolution of literary forms and ideas.

5. Conclusion

The seminar on "Schools & Movements in English Literature" conducted by the Department of English (P.G.) was a valuable academic event that significantly enriched the students' knowledge and appreciation of English literary history. The insights provided by Mr. Ch. Gopi were instrumental in helping students grasp the complexities of literary movements and the contributions of key literary figures. The Department of English (P.G.) anticipates organizing more such seminars to continue fostering a deeper understanding of literature among its students.

Conducting workshop on Non-Verbal Communication

Abhyudaya Degree College.

Interpersonal communication is the process of sharing information, ideas, and opinions between two or more people. It makes teams bond stronger, get to know each other, and find solutions to problems if there are any.

Effective communication and identification of nonverbal cues when having meetings or hot discussions are essential. We often try to hide our emotions, feelings, and ideas but our bodies still send some subtle messages.

Establishing relationships on a professional and personal level requires effective communication abilities. Verbal communication and nonverbal communication are the two main categories and this blog will focus mainly on the non-verbal aspect of communication. Understanding non-verbal communication – such as body language, facial expressions, and gestures – can significantly enhance interpersonal interactions.

Nonverbal communication is frequently unintentional but may reveal a great deal about individuals and situations, even though most of us are aware of it and utilize it frequently.

Learning the types of nonverbal communication means that you can get better at reading body language. While it may seem odd, we all display behaviors that have the same function during stressful situations and not only. Emotions are universal and transcend cultural boundaries, highlighting the importance of mastering non-verbal cues in our communication toolkit. By honing these skills, you can more skilfully navigate interpersonal dynamics and foster deeper connections with others
